Ohio. It was 2013 and Conquest Maps founder, Ross Worden, was looking for a makeup map that he'd given to his new wife for his birthday so they could start traveling more and monitor their adventures together. He realized that what he wanted just didn't exist! And so Conquest Maps was born. We've come a long way from the basement days. Our cheerful company now operates a 4,800-square-foot facility on the east side of Columbus. We produce almost everything, store all our products and fill out all orders from our Columbus facility, and proudly boast a diverse team that can do the work by top standards. He's talking about traveling! Starting with the first pin board map that Ross designed for his wife, he made sure Conquest Maps focused on quality over anything else. It's not something we're communicating about. We are relentless in taking our processes to the next level so that we can create the best possible value for our customers. You get the highest quality products available for a fair price and will always receive the best customer service we can provide. Our comments speak for themselves! Due to the positive upsue of our basic line of pin board maps products, we are focused on finding new ways to inspire your future journeys and keep memories of past adventures fresh in your mind. Where the travels meet the home décor, you will find us there! We like to travel, see the world and pour into everything it has to offer. We think everyone else should! And at the end of every adventure, you have to go home, and we can't wait there to help you with your own conquest! Founder/CEO Since 2013, Ross wears basically every hat on Conquest Maps! Now his focus is mainly on continuing to build the business. He likes to spend his time outdoors, learn and with his growing family!
